Fingerless designs— Some fingerless gloves leave the first joint exposed to allow for excellent dexterity when making knots and working with rope.

Grippy fabric— Most gloves include reinforced cloth with a layer of leather on the inside of the palm to make things easier to grab your rope. This helps you keep control.

Lightweight design— Rappel gloves, like other climbing equipment, are as lightweight as possible while maintaining critical safety characteristics. The majority of the extra features introduced to rappel gloves serve a single purpose: to make rappelling safer for you. Businesses make them like Black Diamond and Petzl, which understand the value of climbing gear, and they come with a slew of added features to make your life easier.
