

Job opportunity for porters (160 posts); general orderlies (160 posts); pharmacy assistants (50 posts) and artisans (15 posts)

23 December 2018

From 02 January 2019, KwaZulu-Natal's public healthcare system will receive a major boost in the form of 300 newly-recruited nurses who will be deployed at health facilities across the province. The 150 Enrolled Nurses and 150 Enrolled Nursing Assistants, who recently underwent a stringent selection process in Durban on 19 December 2018, will be integrated with existing teams of healthcare professionals to strengthen the health system, and help the province improve its health outcomes.

But, as the 300 nurses prepare to resume duty, the KZN Department of Health is now inviting members of the public to apply for the following posts: porters, general orderlies, pharmacy assistants and artisans. These 385 posts are available throughout the province's 11 districts. The job requirements, skills, training, competencies and remuneration package are outlined in the attached advertisement. Applications close on 28 December 2018.

This job recruitment exercise is part of a stimulus package which was first announced by President Cyril Ramaphosa earlier this year and more recently by the Minister of Health Dr Aaron Motsoaledi, to boost the health sector through the creation of more than 5300 jobs throughout the country.

The Department would like to encourage all candidates who may not be successful during this recruitment drive not to despair, but keep up the search until they find another opportunity. The Department will also continue to advertise posts as and when they become available.
